Commentary

Global equity and investment grade fixed income markets ended December broadly flat, posting -0.44% and +0.26% respectively. Trading volumes were predictably thin and we didn't see a Santa rally in US markets. He did visit the UK though, with the FTSE 100 surging towards 10,000 points in the lead up to Christmas.

On the macroeconomic front, the Bank of England (BoE) and Federal Reserve (Fed) cut rates by 0.25%, while European Central Bank (ECB) held rates steady. While inflation gradually fell throughout 2025, uncertainty remains around US trade policy, the President's pick for the next Fed chair and where rates will eventually need to settle. Markets predict 0.50% of rate cuts in both the UK and US by the end of 2026. In Europe, expectations point to a small rise towards year-end; however, any further drop in inflation could open the door to additional cuts. Overall, 2025 marked an unusually divergent interest-rate path between major economies.

In global equities, Financials, Materials and Industrials were the only sectors to post gains during the month, while Technology recorded a modest decline, reflecting ongoing uncertainty around interest rates, profit-taking and renewed concerns that valuations are once again creeping higher. In a reversal of recent trends, European and Emerging Market equities outperformed the S&P 500 in 2025, potentially signalling a reassessment of US exceptionalism and raising questions over how far technology-led valuations can reasonably be extended.

In the fund, JP Morgan European Dynamic (+2.59%) and PolarCap UK Value (+2.35%) had strong months. Edgewood (-1.67%) and T. Rowe Price US Smaller Companies (-1.46%) struggled due to the aforementioned negative factors in the US.

Despite the mid-month rate cut, 10-year US Treasury yields increased marginally in December, ending the month at 4.17%. This followed a sharp rally in November amid policy repricing driven by stronger US economic data. UK 10-year gilt yields were flat over the month, finishing at 4.48%.

December rounded off a solid year for our fixed income and alternative holdings. Special mentions must go to MAN Group Multi-Manager and Marshall Wace TOPS, which both ended the year higher by around 15%.
