Commentary

Equity markets exhibited a cautious and uneven start to the year and the MSCI World index was relatively flat in GBP terms. Most major developed indices posted modest gains, but performance was punctuated by heightened volatility amid geopolitical developments and policy uncertainty. UK equity markets had one of the better starts to the year with the FTSE 100 up +2.94%, largely on the back of strong performance in the financial sector. Our core exposure to the UK comes from Polar Capital UK Value Opportunities which performed well (+5.38%). Some tech and growth stocks faced profit-taking with elevated valuations, a mixed earnings season and continued scrutiny over AI investment returns. As such, the worst performing fund over the month was Edgewood US Select Growth (-4.77%) as it has a US large cap and technology tilt. Microsoft shares dropped around 10% after reporting earnings as investors reacted to cloud growth dynamics and AI-capex concerns but not all tech names struggled; Meta and Alphabet had a good month. Emerging market equities saw strong inflows and outperformance in select markets which was reflected in solid returns from both Aubrey Global Emerging Markets (+2.99%) and Fidelity Asian Smaller Companies (+3.89%).

In the U.S., the Federal Reserve held policy rates steady amid persistent inflation and a resilient labour market, anchoring Treasury yields in the mid 4% range and reinforcing a "higher-for-longer" narrative. Precious metals rallied sharply over the month driven by a confluence of macroeconomic and market factors, most notably a broad-based weakening of the US dollar and heightened safe-haven demand amid fiscal and geopolitical uncertainties. Meanwhile, in the UK, the Bank of England maintained rates as inflation remained above target and economic signals were mixed. Gilt yields displayed volatility, with some downward drift as softer domestic data tempered inflation expectations. Credit markets continue to look robust as spreads remain tight at very low levels and there was healthy issuance in January with companies refinancing debt and locking in favourable terms. Notably, our allocation to alternatives performed well over the last month and was on average the strongest asset class.
