Approach and style

The Fund aims to generate substantial capital growth in the medium to long term by investing in a variety of asset classes. The Fund utilises a top down approach to asset allocation and will invest across a range of asset classes through funds and a wide universe of equity and bond markets. It is intended that the fund will typically be significantly exposed to equity markets raising its risk profile and making it most suitable for a long term investment. The Fund will benefit from an experienced investment committee who will use a variety of research sources and views to construct the portfolio.

Commentary

Investment markets lost their self confidence in the second half of October, following a strong start to the month. With the US election looming, Brexit talks in the UK breaking down once again and of course rising cases of COVID19 around Europe leading to a second wave of lockdowns and tighter restrictions, perhaps it was not so surprising to see some profit taking and a setback in markets. Gains in US and European equity markets in the first half of the month were reversed in the second half, as market volatility spiked on the announcement of new lockdowns in Germany and France. Brexit talks broke down mid-month as the original 16th October deadline date passed without a deal. Talks have since been renewed but there is a real sense of time running out for both sides. The polls were clearly pointing towards a Democratic Joe Biden win in the US election with a clear majority which was referred to as 'a blue wave'. This had implications for markets and bonds sold-off towards month end as the thought of a greater focus on fiscal stimulus and less on monetary easing worried investors. As we write we are waiting for the election results, it is a much closer race than first thought but still looks like a win for Biden and equity markets have reacted positively. The outlook remains good for equities – very impressive financial results released by some of the 'big-tech' companies in the last week of October confirms very strong demand for their products in these unusual times.

Returns were disappointing in October, equity markets were generally lower and as a result developed equity funds were all down. Funds with exposure to the technology sector such as L&G ROBO Global held up better than others, down by 0.13%. Waverton European Dividend Growth which invests in quality stocks across Europe did far less well, down 5.9%. Emerging equity funds with exposure to China fared better and both Aubrey Global Emerging Markets Opportunities and Fidelity Asian Smaller Companies were higher by over 2%. The alternatives allocation was down, with Western Macro Opportunities falling by 1.3% as an example. Fixed income was a mixed bag—Royal London Extra Yield Bond was down as a result of higher yields in longer maturity names but much of our corporate bond exposure fared better—Royal London Short Duration High Yield and TwentyFour Strategic Income both made small positive returns during the month.

Risk and reward profile

The risk and reward category was calculated using historical performance data and it may not be a reliable indicator of the Fund's future risk profile. The risk and reward category shown is not guaranteed to remain unchanged and the categorisation may shift over time. The lowest category does not mean a risk-free investment. The investments of the Fund are subject to normal market fluctuation and other risks inherent in investing in securities and there can be no assurance of capital appreciation. The value of investments and income from them, and therefore the value of the units may go down as well as up and an investor may not get back the original amount invested.
